

AGADIR

Agadir (Arabic: ريداغ Agadīr or Agadīr, Berber (Amazigh):) is a major city in southwest Morocco, capital of the Agadir province (MA-AGD) and the Sous-Massa-Draa economic region.

Agadir has a population of 678,596 (2004; census figures for the agglomeration include the nearby cities of Inezgane and Aït Melloul). The population of the city proper is estimated at 200,000. The mild winter climate (January average midday temperature 20.5°C/69°F) and good beaches have made it a major "winter sun" destination for Northern Europeans. The mayor is Tariq Kabbaj.

The Casbah, which remains the only city wall built by the sixteenth century Saadian north of the city.

The Valley of the Birds, in the avenue of public administration between the Boulevard Mohammed V and Hassan II.

Garden ibn Zaydoun between Avenue du Prince Moulay Abdellah Avenue and 18 November.

The Garden of Portugal and his museum memorial, on the Avenue des FAR.

The Bert Flint Museum on Boulevard Mohammed V

Mosque Loubnan between Avenue du Prince Moulay Abdellah and FAR

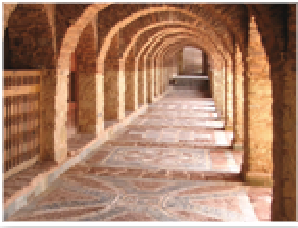

Mosque Mohammed V between Avenue du President Kennedy and that of 29 February.

Synagogue Beth-El, of Fair Street, between Avenue Prince Moulay Abdellah and Boulevard Hassan II said Aboudrare

The Protestant Church on Boulevard Hassan 600 meters from the Old Talborjt.

The Medina of Agadir is a space craft created in 1992 by Italian artist Coco Polizzi, Ben Sergao, a small residential area of Agadir to 4.5 km from downtown. Built using construction techniques traditional Berber, it's a little open-air museum, on five hectares, home to artisan workshops, a museum, individual residences, a hotel and a

INFORMATION

Tourism Office of Agadir

Immeuble A. Place du Prince Héritier Sidi Mohamed

Tel : 48 84 63 77 Fax : 48 84 63 78